The aim of Personhood.net is to communicate that a human person is sacred by virtue of the fact that we are created in the image of a personal benevolent God. This means that all human life must be respected and protected regardless of race, sex, age or condition of dependency. We seek to educate our grassroot pro-life community, to inform government officials of pro-life policy and to provide resources to other non-governmental organizations regarding "What is a person?".

Some assumptions made by men are so basic that they support all other moral and ethical suppositions within a culture. The historical Judeo/Christian understanding of the nature of personhood, foundational to our cultural framework, is being questioned. In response, personhoood.net intends to demonstrate that a shift in belief about the nature of man's being leads to consequences in culture that may be unintended, undesired, or even irreversible. If personhood is not an objective, non-negotiable truth, but an evolving phenomenon in process, then Western society's philosophic, scientific, and legal ethics will change accordingly.

Personhood.net Contributors:

Daniel Becker

Daniel Becker is the President of Georgia Right to Life as well as a National Board Member of National Right to Life. The father of five children (by his late wife Susan) and grandfather to twenty-six, Dan is a long-time pro-life advocate who believes that “the Personhood of all human life” should be the biblical pro-life strategy for the twenty-first century.

Daniel C Becker

777 Rivendell Lane
Alpharetta, GA 30004
Mobil: 678-524.9504

Return to top »